

Connie's Corner

August 12, 2010

Do Flowers Really Talk???

We all know how colorful, fragrant and downright lovely flowers are, but did you know they can talk too...?

Well, you can't really have a conversation with them, but you can speak your feelings through them---through the language of flowers.

In olden days, a particular type or color of flower would be sent to someone because that color or type of flower signified a feeling, or expressed an emotion.

For example, a red rose symbolizes love, passion, respect, courage, I love you, beauty, pure and lovely and prosperity.

A lavender rose signifies love at first sight, enchantment.

Orchids send the feeling of rare beauty, love, refinement, beautiful lady. Lavender represents devotion. An orange lily...flame, I burn for you!

Bells of Ireland: Good luck

Bird of Paradise: Magnificence

There are too many to list of course. Along with special meaning attached to certain flowers, wedding anniversary dates are often celebrated with a certain flower.

For example:

1st: Anniversary: Pansy

5th: Daisy

10th: Daffodil

20th: Day lily

25th: Iris

50th: Violet

Next time you send flowers, you may truly say how you feel through the language of flowers. If you need a few suggestions, I'm sure we can give a little guidance.

That's it for now...I'll just send you a virtual cyclamen. It's meaning?

"Good bye" of course!

Connie
574.293.5584
connie@sautters.net